THE illness of president Wilson has been attended by alerming rumous about his "real condition"—rumous much at variance from the placid belletine which have been insued by the attending physicians at the white burse. These belletins have described the president's condition as unchanged as have said that he passed a restinating for showed a sight improvement.

The rumous vary. They range from brain lexion to recommand, made worse by nervum prostation, and some include a mild form of insusty. Washington is full of such rigidity. They are so influences and so extravagant that any be willing the instruction and the rumous crop thrive.

The United States made use of Maj. Gen. Leanard to senator those of New Hampehire who is alleged to have written a constituent that the president had a brain being and use from as unknown about that the president was not mentally copable of executive acts such as the signing of this passed by congress. That lear had a drain bearing on the peace treaty, now in the three of ratification by the senale.

The brain lesion stuty is afficially decied and the same decied covers the report of executive disability. For Grayson has announced that the president would be able to deal with any emergency which might arise to require executive actics. While Dr. Grayon told the reporters in seeming frankness about the president's condition when he was taken side while on his western tour, the holleties issued stare the return of Mr. Wilson to the white home have been assessmential and unsatisficatory because they have not

Autumn Reveries

COME back to me at autumn time, When the fields are filled with sheaves, And frost-nipped woods held council With a shower of tinted leaves. When asters gaily brave the breeze, And the world seems wrapped in a mare Of gold and purple shadows, O'er wrought with an amber haze, When clusters of waving golden rod, By the roadside nod and lift. And the hours of mystical happiness, Pass sweetly, and all too swift, From the world of a far beyond Gleam lights of the Orient, And changing clouds in the sky Bring a message of sweet content.

Then come to me, my dearest, And together we will go Through balsam-ecented pathways That only the woodwise know.
